When, in 1913, the Mayor of Bournemouth, Alderman Henry McCalmont Hill, cut the white tape for the official opening of Fishermans Walk, he declared the grounds to be “for the use of the inhabitants of Bournemouth for ever”.

Since this time, during the rapid development of Southbourne, this green space has been preserved for both residents and visitors to enjoy. Over the decades, it has become:

- A place of peace and quiet recreation
- A pleasant route to the beach
- An entertainment venue with its bandstand
- A wildlife haven

Recently, The Walk has shared the national decline of open spaces as local authorities have had to divert their budgets towards increasing social needs.

As a result, the FFW was launched in 2006, just one of hundreds of voluntary organizations which have sprung up to save our valuable open spaces from decline and the threat of development.

Friends of Fishermans Walk

The FFW was formed in 2006, following the fiasco of the Vodaphone mast which was erected in The Walk without permission or consultation with the local community.

We are determined to halt the decline of this important Open Space, and are at present focused on improvements to, and maintenance of

- The Bandstand
- The Pond
- The Gardens
- The Pergola
- The Trees
- Wildlife balance
- Park Furniture
- The Toilets
- Signage and Information

We always welcome any suggestions you may have
